Derbyniwyd ateb wrth Mr Robert Edgecombe Swyddog priodol y Cyngor Sir a welir isod / A reply was received from Mr Robert Edgecombe the County Council's Monitoring Officer which is shown below

"If the Councillor is the appointed representative of the council on the board of governors, then he/she will have a personal interest in the matter which must be declared in the usual way. However, because they are an appointee of the Council, that interest is not a prejudicial one due to a specific exemption in the code. That means that, so long as they have declared the interest, they can still participate in the debate and vote.

The position of the church appointed governors is different. Again they have a personal interest which must be declared, but because they were not appointed by the Council the exemption mentioned above does not apply. Therefore in my view they will have a personal and prejudicial interest and cannot participate in the debate or vote, and must leave the room when the matter is discussed. The only way they can get around this is to seek dispensation from the Standards committee."
